Architect Les W. Travis

LES W. TRAVIS, Architect, came on board at GARY GUY WILSON, AIA, ARCHITECT STUDIOS..., in October, 2002, just as the company was celebrating brand new offices at 7625 Dean Martin Drive in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Born in Manchester, England, Les moved to Canada, where he majored in Architecture. Then it was onto California, where he worked for Southern California Edison for over 30 years. As the Supervising Architect/Project Manager, he was accountable for the supervision of Project Managers, Architects, Landscape Architects, CAD Technicians, and Mechanical and Electrical Engineers. He and his staff produced a multitude of successful projects—among those several technical training, information, and education centers.

In 1996, Les and his wife, DeAnna, left the West Coast for Las Vegas. He may have changed locations, but he never varied his approach to project management. Client service has always been a priority throughout his illustrious career.

Les was invited to join GARY GUY WILSON, AIA, ARCHITECT STUDIOS... in October, 2002—a new face in a new building. He jumped right in, directing the production of construction documents for the new Clark High School Theater Addition, scheduled to open in Spring, 2004. His professionalism was immediately evident, keeping a perfect balance between managing his team and building solid client communications.
